Hollywood, 1927. The star George Valentin is the pride and joy of the president of the Kinograph Studios Al Zimmer and worshiped by a legion of fans. Among them is Peppy Miller, who stumbles into George Valentin after the premiere of a silent film. Peppy kisses George and the photographers take pictures of them. The next morning, the headlines read "Who is that girl?" and Peppy is selected in a dancing audition to be an extra in a film. Over the next few years, Peppy climbs positions in the Kinograph Studios until the advent of talking pictures. Proud George Valentin does not believe in the 'talkies', breaks off with the studio and decides to produce and direct a silent film. The film is a complete failure and with the Great Depression, George Valentin falls and is bankrupt. Meanwhile Peppy Miller rises as new star of Kinograph Studios. But she never forgets her idol George Valentin. Written by Claudio Carvalho, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

Film Synopsis:

As the era of silent films draws to a close, two actors find their careers and their relationship influenced by the coming of talking pictures. While popular screen star George Valentin resists the transition to sound, young Peppy Miller embodies a modern age that is leaving Valentin behind.

The UGA Performing Arts Center Presents:

Coppélia

Performed by:
THE MOSCOW FESTIVAL BALLET

JOIN US FOR AN EVENING OF CULTURE AND FUN.

The Moscow Festival Ballet was founded in 1989 by its artistic director former Bolshoi Ballet star Sergei Radchenko, who wanted to form an independent company uniting dancers from across Russia and representing the best of Russian classical ballet.

Coppélia is one of the worlds best loved comic ballets; music by Leo Delibes; choreography by Arthur Saint-Leon. The story, based on the E.T.A. Hoffmann story "Der Sandmann", is the tale of an eccentric inventor, Dr Coppélius, who creates the beautiful life-size mechanical doll, Coppélia. This results in a comedy of errors when a young man, Franz, is infatuated with her, and his lover, Swanilda, decides to replace her to win him back.
